FIREPLACE construction that makes it possible for everyone to enjoy the congeniality and comfort of an open fireplace even though there is no chimney.

A Portable Mantelpiece, in a period design to harmonize with your furniture, brings to any room a central point around which to arrange family groups or guests. A fireplace immediately establishes a centre of interest. Peace and Romance, throughout the ages, have been born in the crackling flames or in the mystic glow of dying embers. Little wonder that the hearthstone has become the center of home interests. Here in the glow of the flame lies inspiration for great accomplishment, here the spirit of rest for tired minds, here that feeling of contentment which draws our friends to our homes. What room is not improved, given light and life by an open fireplace?

A blank wall, unbroken by window or door openings, presents a decorative problem most home owners are rarely able to solve successfully.

The Portable Mantelpiece offers a unique, inexpensive solution of the problem. See the change wrought in this blank wall by the installation of this unit, costing little more than a reasonably priced chair or occasional table.

This booklet is primarily intended to show the Wood Mantelpiece in its proper role; that of enhancing the livability of the room and providing an attractive fireplace setting. On the following pages are pictured a number of beautifully designed Portable Mantelpieces for decorative use. They are so easily placed and moved that it is now possible for every room, with or without a flue, in apartments or dwellings or even office buildings to possess the genial cheer of a glowing fireplace.

Design of the English Regency Period

Late Adam motifs are here adapted to proportions suited to the small living room or bedroom. Simplicity and grace have been achieved in this model without sacrificing any of the characteristic architectural features of the period.

The mantel is finished in Ivory Enamel glazed Antique Brown. This, together with the wood facing marbled in old rose color with the opening mould marbled white, presents a charming color harmony. The wood lining is furnished in slate color.

A Nineteenth Century English Design

This pattern is a reproduction in wood of one of the fine white marble mantels in use during the first part of the 19th century. The three delicately wrought classical urns break the severe lines of the frieze, creating a lovely effect. This mantelpiece is suited not only to English rooms, but also to those furnished in the post-Colonial manner.

Furnished in Ivory Enamel glazed Antique Brown. The facing shown is steel, marbled black and gold, while the fireplace liner is of steel, finished in slate color.

English Tudor

Characteristic Seventeenth Century designing is evident in this English model with its bold relief and decorative treatment of pilasters and frieze. The arched fireplace opening seems to invite the crackling cheeriness of a log fire setting. The wood facing is finished imitation sandstone, lending an atmosphere of staunch solidity to harmonize with the massive treatment of the mantelpiece. Facing and hearth of cast stone, for use with real fire can be furnished for this mantel.

Can be had in Plain Oak, Cathedral finish as shown above, or of Quartered Red Gum Wood, finished in Mahogany or Walnut color. The lining is of wood, slate color.

An Adam Design

The freedom of design and wide range of decoration makes the Adam style one of the easiest from which to select a pattern expressing the home owner's individuality. Here is another distinctive mantelpiece, with a slightly classical feeling, due in the main to the conventional urn design in the center of the frieze.

Furnished in Ivory Enamel glazed in Antique Brown. The facing is wood, marbled black and gold, and the fireplace lining is also of wood, finished slate color.

Length of Shelf	53 inches	Wood Opening Width	38 inches
